Another post said: "Everyone's talking about Twitter going up in flames but our cars did that before it was cool."

An account impersonating Nintendo tweeted an image of the Super Mario character holding up a middle finger. Another posing as the pharmaceutical brand Eli Lilly tweeted that insulin was now free. "We apologize to those who have been served a misleading message from a fake Lilly account." the official account tweeted.

One account with a blue tick appeared to show former US president George W. Bush tweeting an offensive message according to screenshots circulating online. The images showed another false account claiming to be former British prime minister Tony Blair retweeting the post. Both had been deleted later.

Twitter's trust and safety team spent Thursday morning focusing on the most high-profile of the instances, but after a spate of layoffs could only deal with impersonators of the highest profile accounts, people familiar with the development said. The team had no bandwidth to deal with fraud related to legacy verified accounts, such as those for journalists, with smaller followings, they said.

Later on Thursday, Yoel Roth, the company's head of trust and safety, resigned, sources said. Roth was one of the most visible executives gaining power under Musk, as he took to Twitter to explain the company's shifting policies.

A member of the trust and safety team at Twitter said the unit's future was unknown, and that Roth had been acting as an advocate and a shield for the group - and had seemingly been in Musk's good graces. Roth's former direct reports met to discuss the blue check mark problem shortly after Musk made his first address to employees, telling them that bankruptcy was possible if the company doesn't start generating more cash, the people said. CPPIB First Invested $392 m in ReNew in '18

CPPIB first invested in ReNew in 2018, after the company aborted its India IPO plans, deploying around $392 million at a 2.2 billion valuation. Being domiciled in India then, the pershare price for the transaction for the private company was Rs 410.

In February this year: Goldman sold 18 million Class A shares and 3.4 million Class C shares of the company at a similar $6.50 each to CPPIB for $139 million. The investment took the Canadian pension fund's voting rights to 26.2% from 20.1% and its economic interest became 14%. CPPIB also agreed to buy an additional 9 million Class C shares from Goldman at the same price for another $58.5 million. This took place shortly after ReNew announced a $250 million share buyback, six months after its listing. For full report, go to www.economictimes.com

London appeal judges on Friday lifted reporting restrictions on hearings centred around Srichand's health, following an 18-month legal battle by Bloomberg News, Press Association and the UK's Official Solicitor, ending years of secrecy that tied into a commercial case over the empire.

Judge Anthony Hayden said he had been troubled by the extent to which SP had been marginalised by the family-."He has been demoted to the back row of the court and he will be returned to the front," the judge said. This is a "war and peace" story, Gopichand's lawyer saidat the end of the Court of Appeal hearing.

PACT ABANDONED

At the heart of the battle was a pact signed by the four Hinduja brothers in 2014 — that "everything belongs to everyone and nothing belongs to anyone."

The three other brothers claimed that the letter governed succession planning, but Srichand's descendants challenged this, saying his branch of the family was being sidelined. That battle ended after lawyers for Gopichand in June said the family had agreed to effectively tear up the arrangement. His elder brother and him once acted together as "one soul," Gopichand, 84, told the judge in August, at times in tears. Now, however, the stage may be set for the break-up of the conglomerate.

With the latest inflation print coming in lower than expected, market participants believe the pace of rate hikes by the US Fed would moderate. European markets were marginally in the green, having erased initial gains. The Stoxx Europe 600 was up 0.08% at close on Friday. "The policy measures taken by the US Fed are showing early signs that inflation is slowing. The Fed will continue in its trajectory of raising rates in the future meetings, but in smaller quantums. This should keep investor flows and sentiment positive for the markets," said Joshi.
